It's under our feet. But what is it? And how did it get there? Inspired by William Bryant Logan's acclaimed book Dirt: The Ecstatic Skin of the Earth, directors Bill Benenson and Gene Rosow take a critical look at our complex relationship with dirt and the solutions to restore this vital natural resource. Get the "dirt" on how industrial farming, mining, and urban development has led us toward cataclysmic droughts, starvation, floods, and climate change.

Presented by KETC/Channel 9 and the Missouri History Museum, in collaboration with Independent Lens, Independent Television Service, FOCUS St. Louis, and Washington University's Film and Media Studies Department
